

North American Aerospace & Defense (NORAAD) Trust

Series 2

A 2 Year Unit Investment Trust

Aerospace & Defense Industry

Despite the setbacks and operational challenges brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic and ongoing turbulence in global economies, analysts are very optimistic about the aerospace and defense (A&D) industry. Annual earnings growth of 12% over the next five years are being forecasted, likely fueled by needed increases in defense spending necessitated by increased military conflict across the world.

- Defense outlays in the United States amounted to $746 billion U.S. dollars in 2023
- Defense spending in the United States is predicted to increase every year over the next decade, totaling approximately $1.1 trillion in 2033 – that represents an increase of over 47%
- Emerging technologies in space, supersonics/hypersonics, and Advanced Air Mobility (AAM) are poised to change the industry landscape in the coming years with AAM in the United States alone estimated to reach $115 billion annually by 2035

Investment Objective

The trust seeks total return potential through capital appreciation and dividend income. There is no guarantee that the investment objective of the trust will be achieved.

Investment Strategy

The trust seeks to achieve its objective through investment in equity securities of companies that trade on a North American exchange and belong to the “Industrials – Capital Goods – Aerospace & Defense” Global Industry Classification Standard (GICS®) industry. In selecting the securities, the sponsor also considered factors including, but not limited to, market capitalization, average trading volume, 12-month dividend yield, trailing twelve-month free cash flow balances, price/earnings ratios, and analyst ratings. The portfolio is not necessarily equally weighted and is weighted based on the sponsor’s view of the total return potential of the selected companies within the aerospace & defense industry over the life of the trust.

Risk Considerations

Unitholders can lose money by investing in this trust. An investment in units of the trust should be made with an understanding of the risks related to the trust, such as the following:

- Security prices will fluctuate. The value of your investment may fall over time. The potential economic impacts of the novel form of coronavirus disease first detected in 2019 (“COVID-19”), which spread rapidly around the globe which led the World Health Organization to declare the COVID-19 outbreak a pandemic in March 2020, are not fully known. The COVID-19 pandemic, or any future public health crisis, are impossible to predict and could result in adverse market conditions which may negatively impact the performance of the securities in the portfolio and the trust.
- The financial condition of an issuer may worsen or its credit ratings may drop, resulting in a reduction in the value of your units. This may occur at any point in time, including during the initial offering period.
- The issuer of a security may be unwilling or unable to declare dividends in the future or may reduce the level of dividends declared. This may reduce the level of distributions the trust pays which could reduce your income and cause the value of your units to fall.
- The trust is considered to be concentrated in securities issued by companies in the industrials sector and the aerospace and defense industry. Negative developments in this sector or industry may affect the value of your investment more than would be the case in a more diversified investment. General risks of companies in the industrials sector include the general state of the economy, worldwide competition the impacts of existing and changing government regulations and spending, and consumer spending trends. General risks of companies in the aerospace & defense industry include changes in government regulation and spending policies, decreased demand for new equipment and disputes over government contracts.
- The trust invests in stocks of small and mid-size companies. These stocks are often more volatile and have lower trading volumes than stocks of larger companies. Small and mid-size companies may have limited products or financial resources, management inexperience and less publicly available information.
- The trust is not actively managed. Except in limited circumstances, the trust will hold, and continue to buy, shares of the same securities even if their market value declines.
- The sponsor may offer successive trusts with similar portfolios thereby allowing the investor to pursue the same strategy over a number of years. Investors should consider their ability to pursue investing in successive trusts, if available. There may be tax consequences associated with investing in the trust and rolling over an investment from one trust to the next.
