

Premier Banking Opportunities Trust

Series 10

A 2 Year Unit Investment Trust

Premier Banking Opportunities

The banking industry maintains a unique and prominent position within the U.S. economy. Banking is a mature and often profitable industry, and the sector's participants act as an essential part of the nation's overall economic activity. Banking continues to be highly regulated, helping to provide financial strength and predictability. It also exhibits the characteristics of being a highly fragmented industry that provides near commodity-like products and services.

The interwoven dynamics of technology, customer preferences, and interest rates continue to drive disruptive changes within the banking industry. We believe that the importance of banking within the U.S. economy coupled with these disruptive forces will have the potential to translate into a better performing and more concentrated banking industry.

Strategy Background

We seek to identify banking and thrift institutions that:

- Have the potential to maximize the opportunities that exist in the current economic environment
- Are effective at growing and maintaining profitable customer relationships within the current high engagement, yet low contact environment
- Embrace current technology to enhance profitability while effectively managing risk

Selection Process

Analyzing companies in the banking industry requires a unique review, and for this Trust, we consider those in the Regional Banks sub-industry.

In selecting the securities for the Trust's portfolio, we sought to identify companies we define as "premier banking opportunities" which are companies that we determined have the greatest potential to achieve the Trust's investment objective based on factors including, but not limited to, those identified below.

Risk Considerations

Unitholders can lose money by investing in this trust. An investment in units of the trust should be made with an understanding of the risks related to the trust, such as the following:

- Security prices will fluctuate. The value of your investment may fall over time. Market values of securities held by the trust may fluctuate in response to various factors. These can include changes in interest rates, inflation, the financial condition of a security's issuer, perceptions of the issuer, adverse events impacting a particular industry or sector and/or significant events impacting the entire securities market. The financial condition of an issuer may worsen or its credit ratings may drop, resulting in a reduction in the value of your units. A drop in credit rating generally indicates an increased likelihood of an issuer's risk of default on a loan. Where an issuer's credit rating is decreased, the perceived financial health of the company, the perceived value of the company and the corresponding market value of its equity securities will generally decrease. This may occur at any point in time, including during the initial offering period.
- The financial condition of an issuer may worsen or its credit ratings may drop, resulting in a reduction in the value of your units. This may occur at any point in time, including during the initial offering period.
- An issuer may be unwilling or unable to declare dividends in the future or may reduce the level of dividends declared. This may reduce the level of income the trust receives which would reduce your income and cause the value of your units to fall. It is also possible that current or future government aid programs could limit companies from paying dividends as a condition to receiving government aid or discourage companies from doing so.
- The trust is considered to be concentrated in securities issued by companies in the financials sector. Negative developments in this sector may affect the value of your investment more than would be the case in a more diversified investment. General risks of companies in the financials sector include developments in financial markets, interest rates, cost of capital funds, credit losses and the impacts of existing and changing government regulations.
- The trust invests significantly in banks and thrifts. Banks, thrifts and their holding companies are subject to the risks associated with the adverse effects of economic recession, currency exchange rates, extensive government regulation at both the federal and state level, competition from non-traditional lending sources, decreases in the availability of capital and volatile interest rates. Negative developments impacting these companies and related industries will affect the value of your investment more than would be the case in a more diversified investment.
- The trust may invest in stocks of small and mid-size companies. These stocks are often more volatile and have lower trading volumes than stocks or larger companies. Small and mid-size companies may have limited products or financial resources, management inexperience and less publicly available information.
- The trust is not actively managed. Except in limited circumstances, the trust will hold, and continue to buy, shares of the same securities even if their market value declines.
- The sponsor may offer successive Trusts with similar portfolios thereby allowing the investor to pursue the same strategy over a number of years. Investors should consider their ability to pursue investing in successive Trusts, if available. There may be tax consequences associated with investing in the Trust and rolling over an investment from one Trust to the next.
